What's on the Christmas wishlist?

My family was fairly poor when I was growing up. When it came to Christmas, practical and useful were the terms most often used for gift ideas. All except for when it came to my rich uncle. I knew he would come through with a great outdoor gift, like a really nice fishing rod and reel combination.

When I opened his package on Christmas morning, I was startled to see he had my gift in a box from Penney's. I thought that rather odd, because Penney's did not sell nice rod and reel combos, and the box was too small. Perhaps a selection of fine hand-tied flies was inside.

Oh the horror of Christmas morning as I opened that package to see it contained an expensive dress shirt and a necktie. Necktie? Geez, I didn't even have a neck

"This is the worst Christmas ever," I complained to my Grandmother.

"Shut up and put on your new shirt and tie and come down for dinner," was her gentle response. Everyone who has an outdoor person on their gift list can use a little advice for something to get them. I will try and come up with a few ideas for you here, and hopefully not present anything that would give the family finances a double hernia.

First on my list would be a good flashlight. The older I get, it seems like the world gets a little bit darker. I carry a good light with me everyday, everywhere I go. I have found the Surefire brands to be completely bomb proof and work extremely well.

The Surefire EDCL2-T will fill the bill for whatever your chosen outdoor activity is. From hiking, hunting, fishing, biking, to everyday carry, this light is perfect. It weighs 4.1 ounces with the batteries (2 CR123 Lithium.)

For survival situations and camping, a long-lasting light of low intensity is best. This light has a low setting (5 lumens) that will run for 60 hours on a set of batteries. The high setting is a blinding 1200 lumens with an hour runtime. Throw this light in your pocket with a couple spare batteries and you are set for whatever the woods throws at you. Suggested retail $179.00 Surefire.com

My next suggestion is one of a more generic nature, rather than a specific brand. Just about anybody who recreates outdoors has a need for good T-shirts. I wear a T-shirt under my long underwear during the winter, and live in one during the

The most important word you hear when we discuss clothing like this is "moisture wicking." Keeping the moisture away from your skin will keep you warmer in the winter and cooler in the summer. Dry is the secret.

Shirts made of straight polyester have a tendency to be too warm for me, not breathing enough, but that is a personal preference. I really like them blended with something else, even a small amount of cotton. Cotton is not your friend because it does not repel moisture, so very small amount blended in.

Moisture wicking T-shirts are made by Carhartt, Under Armour, KUIU, Sitka, Reebok, and REI. You can find them at Murdoch's, Big Five and a score of on-line shops. I don't think there is an outdoor person anywhere who could not use a few more T-shirts.

I discovered an interesting line of packs made by Hill People Gear in Grand Junction. They are called Kit Bags. It is a small pack (made in several sizes and styles) that you wear over your shoulders with the pack centered in the upper portion of your chest, leaving arms, back and waist unencumbered by packs Kit bags were originally designed as a way to discreetly carry a pistol that does not interfere with your backpack. These cell phones, GPS, first aid, snacks, cameras etc.that most folks chose to use them even without a pistol. These packs are especially good for bicycling, ATV, motorcycles, snowmobiling and hikers. They even make a special one for search and rescue that is now my duty pack. Prices start at $85.00 and can be bought at www.hillpeoplegear.com or visit their store in Grand Junction.

A person has to be careful when choosing gifts so as not to send the wrong message. I once bought my wife a vacuum cleaner. The response was, "Are you saying that my house is dirty...." from a wife who took it wrong. I admit I was smarter about gift giving after that.

It is with caution that I offer the next suggestion for the outdoor person on your gift list. A Gym membership. However, before you go freaking out, I don't mean your typical gym where you go watch all the people in a row riding bicycles or the muscle head guys deadlift 500 pounds.

How about a membership in a gym where specially educated therapists and trainers put together an exercise regime specific for you and your chosen outdoor passion?

Whether you are 50 and ride bicycles, 30 and run trails, or 60 and enjoy extreme backpacking, you can get a program tailored to your specific physical abilities, limitations, and the sport you choose to take part in. That is exactly what In Motion Therapy is offering with their In Motion in Season

Start out with an assessment with a special therapist, specific to you and your abilities. Your goals and a program for you to reach them will be included. Then you get cut loose in their gym that includes everything from weights, machines, water and pool programs, and many cardio-enhancing machines. This is all done at their state of the art facility at 611 E. Star Court, Suite C, in Montrose. Sports specific assessments start at $35 and memberships begin at $30 monthly with several options available.

I think I may have found the ultimate belt for the outdoor enthusiast. Traditional belts require you to decide on a specific hole in the belt for fit, This predetermined waist measurement can be off for reasons as simple as you overate yesterday, or the amount of stuff you are carrying around in your pockets.

Enter the Ultimate Carry Belt from Blade-Tech. This is a series of belts made from your choice of leather or nylon and each fits a waist from 25 to 50 inches. You cut the belt to you specific requirements. The buckle uses a ratcheting system of cinching up the belt for your comfort level. I loosen up mine a couple clicks when I sit down in the truck, or tighten it up a few when I load my pockets with gear.

The belts were originally designed for people who carry a concealed firearm on their waist, but I have found them to be terrific for everyday wear as well as using them when I take to the outdoors and have things like a knife and multi-tool on my belt. My wife liked mine so much, she asked Santa to bring her one of the leather ones for her. Prices start at $49.99 and can be ordered at www.blade-tech.com.

That concludes my annual Christmas list. I don't think I offered anything that would deliver a double hernia to anyone's Christmas finances. I better not get anything in one of those fancy clothes boxes this year. I hope everyone has a great holiday season and that your tree is loaded with presents under it.

this doesn't make me excited about kissing someone beneath it! So what brought about this tradition? To make a long story short, the existence of mistletoe had a history of being associated with magic and mystery. It was thought that mistletoe could bring long life, promote fertility, and guard against poisoning. Although the berries are toxic, it was even used as an aphrodisiac. Around the time of the New Year, the Druids would collect mistletoe from their "holy oak" tree and offer some as a sacrifice to the gods. A part of it was hung up during a ceremony in which people would stand under it and kiss, showing an end to their old grievances with each other. Although the custom has changed, the practice of kissing under it never completely died out.

Are you curious about where the tradition of the Christmas tree comes from? I've found there are quite a few legends of how and why we have Christmas trees. Historians tell us that in the late Middle Ages, Germans and Scandinavians placed evergreen trees inside their homes or just outside the door to show their hope for the forthcoming spring.

It's said that in 1500, Martin Luther was walking through the snow-covered woods and was struck with the beauty of a group of evergreens. The snow-covered branches with the stars twinkling through them inspired him to set up a small tree indoors while he shared this story with his children. He then decorated the tree with candles (which I do not recommend) and lit them in honor of Christ's birth.

Some say the Christmas tree tradition came to America during the American Revolution or with German immigrants, yet in the 1840's most Americans thought Christmas trees were pagan symbols and were never really accepted.

1846 Queen Victoria and Prince Albert were featured in a sketch in the Illustrated London News, standing with their children around a Christmas tree. Because the royal family was so popular the Brits and people in the US on the East Coast picked up the tradition and it caught on. As people heard about this, they also began decorating trees, and it caught on with the tradition growing more popular throughout the years. It's kind of interesting that Europeans used small trees about four feet in height, while Americans preferred large trees that reached from floor to ceiling. These days I think anything goes.

According to the National Christmas Tree Association, Americans still prefer real Christmas trees. In fact, in 2018 Americans purchased 32.8 million real Christmas trees compared to 23.6 million artificial trees. There are approximately 15,000 Christmas tree growers in the U.S. alone. These farms cover more than 1 million acres of land, which is often unsuited for other crops. Because it takes the average Christmas tree 4 to 16 years to reach a height of approximately 6 feet, growers plant two to three trees for every tree harvested. While these trees are growing, they aid our environment by reducing the carbon dioxide levels in the atmosphere. Cutting your own tree in the forest helps thin the forest to rejuvenate it. So don't be afraid to purchase a live cut tree. Cut trees can even be shredded and used for mulch after the holidays.

The bottom line is, many of our traditions go back a long way. I guess we keep them around because they're fun and festive. They help give us a sense of belonging, and just seem to say Merry Christmas!
